A HALF MILLION DIVIDENDS

An Outcome of Consolidated Virginia and California Mines.

San Francisco [illegible]

[illegible] Wayman yesterday rendered an important [illegible] in the case of Samuel Hartand David [illegible] Lissak in favor [illegible] the defendant. The suit was brought in July 1875 [illegible] partnership dealings [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] The plaintiffs [illegible] stock of the [illegible] the plaintiffs [illegible] the defendants [illegible] The defendant [illegible] answered denying all the allegations of the [illegible] The testimony was [illegible] The principal witnesses for plaintiffs were themselves, their bookkeeper, the wife of one of the plaintiffs and Louis Lissak. Those for the defendant were the defendant himself, the late Michael Reese, and the former partner of the plaintiffs. The parties had been intimate friends for many years and had constant business relations, the plaintiffs [illegible] in the poultry business in California [illegible] paid $11 50 per share [illegible] In May [illegible] the capital stock of the company was [illegible] In 1874 the California Mining Company was organized, and a part of the Con Virginia ground was conveyed to the new corporation in exchange the shares of its capital stock in [illegible] twelfths of a share of the California company for each share of the Con Virginia. In January 1875 the stock of [illegible] Virginia was quintupled so that the original 100 shares then became [illegible] 500 shares of one corporation and 201 shares of the other. The total amount of dividends on these shares [illegible] In the [illegible] between the parties had [illegible] the complicated and there appeared to have been as the court expressed it a remarkable negligence on the part of the plaintiffs in conducting the interest in the matter. After an elaborate review of the facts and figures adduced in testimony Judge Wayman remarked "I find myself forced to the conclusion that the plaintiffs are not entitled to the relief demanded." Judgment for defendant.

GULLIVER ABBOTT OF SAWTOOTH.

His Discovery in an Idaho Cave of a Fire-Breathing Giant, [illegible] and the Bones of a Salmon Eating Giant.

Ketchum Idaho [illegible]

Last Sunday Foley Abbott, of Sawtooth, went on to the high and rugged peak opposite the Pilgrim mine, on Beaver Gulch, to kill some game. As the "beautiful" was about three feet deep he went on snow shoes. The trip was a hard one as the mountain is a very steep and he was obliged to make many tacks to reach the summit. While he was passing near one of the big granite [illegible] he noticed that there was an opening under it and thought he had found a good place to rest and be protected from the wind, so he proceeded to it. Seeing that darkness was inside and the cave appearing to be of good size, he made a torch of slivers taken from a pitch pine log near by, and proceeded to explore his new find. After going through a long, narrow, and crooked passage he found himself inside of a large chamber with smooth floor and perfectly dry, which was brilliantly lighted by a flame in the center. As this was the main attraction he cautiously went to it. To his astonishment he found an image of a man made of what had the appearance of silver and what he thinks it is. At the head was a peculiar pattern of helmet on which were three imitation feathers made of [illegible] From the mouth of the strange figure proceeded the flame. Mr. Abbott thinks that these prehistoric and undoubtedly very intelligent races [illegible] had discovered a gas jet and that there is communication down through the body to the solid rock from which the gas proceeds perpetually. It is an evidence that there is an immense body of coal oil under the mountain from which the gas proceeds. After satisfying his curiosity by looking at the wonderful lamp he tremblingly commenced a search for other objects.

On the walls were hieroglyphics which of course he could not read. In one corner was a very large human skeleton at least nine feet high—and by it a stone tomahawk and a large cross-bow, which although it had the appearance of being perfectly sound, fell into a thousand pieces when he attempted to lift it. A stone mortar containing some very rich gold specimens was found and also six large pieces of ruby silver. Some bushels of bones of salmon were scattered around, proving that the inhabitants of this cavern were salmon eaters. There were many other things in the apartment, such as arrow heads, bones of animals and a petrified human hand.

TOBACCO GROWING STATES.

Kentucky according to the last census report, grows [illegible] per cent of the entire tobacco crop of the country. Kentucky therefore stands first as regards the area planted and the amount gained, among the fifteen states that supply 99 pounds out of every 100 pounds grown. Virginia comes next then Pennsylvania, Ohio, Tennessee, North Carolina, Maryland, Connecticut, Missouri, Wisconsin, Indiana, New York, Massachusetts, Illinois and West Virginia. Kentucky was credited in the last report with 226,12[illegible] acres planted and 171,120,[illegible] pounds of tobacco grown, giving an average per acre of 75[illegible] pounds. West Virginia, which ends the list, had 4071 acres planted and 2,296,[illegible] pounds of tobacco giving an average of 564 pounds per acre. Virginia had 17,[illegible]23 acres under cultivation with a crop harvested of 80,[illegible] pounds giving an average of 753 pounds per acre.

The yield varies all the way from [illegible] pounds per acre in Connecticut [illegible] pounds per acre in North Carolina. Connecticut had only [illegible] acres under cultivation and gained a crop amounting to 14,044,[illegible] pounds, while North Carolina with [illegible] acres reported a yield of [illegible],068,448 pounds. The large yield per acre gained in Connecticut is due in part at least to the extensive supply and use of fertilizers. Massachusetts, which does not occupy half the area that Connecticut does, shows the second largest yield per acre [illegible] pounds. Pennsylvania raised [illegible] pounds per acre, New York [illegible] pounds. Wisconsin [illegible] pounds and Ohio [illegible] pounds per acre.

The remaining one per cent of the entire crop of the country grown outside the states named is reported in small amounts from twenty-two other states and territories. The total crop amounted to 472,[illegible] pounds, a fraction over nine pounds for every inhabitant young and old. A large amount however is exported.

At that time a credit [illegible] was wanted at [illegible] I had formerly worked and where [illegible] friends [illegible] was equally unfortunate in my application at [illegible] Troy. The objection in both cases was that I had been too busy [illegible] excitement about Morgan.

Meantime the mystery deepened and public meetings were held in several villages [illegible] In the meeting at Rochester it was announced that all good citizens would unite in an effort to vindicate the law. A committee was appointed consisting of seven [illegible] discovered that the three Masons went from the committee to the lodge room. It was then quietly ascertained that two of these gentlemen were concerned in the abduction, and that Morgan had been committed to the jail in Canandaigua on a false charge of larceny and that he had been carried from thence secretly by night to Fort Niagara. The committee encountered an obstacle in obtaining indictments in five of the six counties where indictments were needed. The sheriffs [illegible] the grand [illegible] Freemasons [illegible] counties [illegible] Ontario, however, the district attorney [illegible] Whiting and the sheriff Joseph Garlinghouse [illegible] Masons regarded their obligation to the laws [illegible] the state paramount [illegible] and District Attorney Whiting discharged their duties independently and honestly [illegible] investigations [illegible] evidence [illegible] Morgan had been [illegible] confined in the [illegible] conveyed to Fort Niagara, where he was confined in the magazine. There was every reason to believe that he was taken from the magazine and drowned in Lake Ontario. This, however, was boldly and persistently denied—denials accompanied by sole assurance that Morgan and [illegible] alive in several places [illegible] public sentiment. At town meetings several months after Morgan's disappearance the question was [illegible] into politics. A large number of [illegible] anti-Masons determined [illegible] political issue [illegible]

In the autumn of 1827, the discovery of the body of an unknown man on the shore of Lake Ontario near the mouth of Oak Orchard creek, gave a new and absorbing aspect to the question. The description of that body as published by the coroner who held an inquest over it induced the belief that it was the body of William Morgan. [illegible]

FRIDAY MORNING, DEC. 15, 1882.

CONGRESS AND THE RAILROADS.

Congress has power, under the constitution, to regulate commerce between the states. Inter-state commerce is now carried on mainly by the railways. Yet when this power to regulate was placed in the hands of congress no one had the least conception of the results that would be wrought by the railroad. This now almost sole instrument of inter-state commerce was then wholly unknown.

Congress has never taken any definite action under this constitutional power. Repeated attempts have been made during several years past to enact measures of regulation, but without success. The congressional career of Mr. Reagan, of Texas, embodies the history of these endeavors. He has studied the subject in detail, has reported on it at length, and has brought in bills to embrace and enforce the principles he has presented. Some of these principles might be very advantageous to the people, particularly those of the Pacific coast; for the great transcontinental lines can be regulated, if at all, only by act of congress; but other provisions seem unwise in conception and perhaps unsound in theory. There are two features, however, which ought to be in every railway charter which is granted by the government when accompanied by a subsidy or by special privileges in any form. One is that "one person shall not be charged more for a service than another person is charged for the same service;" and the other is that, "In no case shall a charge for a part of the road exceed the charge over the whole of the road." Mr. Reagan has framed his bills to enforce these principles, but has met with an opposition, chiefly from the Pacific railway monopoly, which has defeated his efforts.

That it may be perfectly understood what the last of the above-named conditions means, it may be well to state that a car load of freight from Chicago to Winnemucca costs twice as much as a car load from Chicago to San Francisco, though Winnemucca is over three hundred miles nearer to Chicago. Again, from San Francisco to Winnemucca the charges are the through rates to Ogden and the local rates back to Winnemucca. "This too," says the Salt Lake Tribune, "over a road which was constructed out of the public treasury to be a comfort and a convenience to the people, and which, on reasonable terms, was to bind the east and the west together." We venture the guess that there is too much good sense in the management of the Northern Pacific to do business on this principle when that road shall have been completed.

Mr. Reagan's bills have also attempted to prevent the pooling of freights by different companies. It may be doubted whether this is a necessary proposition. If the rates of transportation are fixed high enough to be just to the companies and low enough to be just to the people, then the companies may make their own combinations without injury to the public. There will very soon be five railroads through from the Mississippi to the Pacific, and they must earn a fair return on the cost of construction. The time will come when there will be an adjustment something like this [illegible]. A certain price will be charged for the loading and unloading of a ton, or part of a ton, of freight, and then a certain sum per mile will be charged for carrying that freight. [illegible] and on several roads the price [illegible] lower than in the sparsely settled [illegible] and where grades are heavy. This [illegible] way to adjust the carrying of [illegible], and its simplicity and perfect [illegible] will by and by be appreciated.

DUELING.

It would seem that the attempt to force [illegible], one of the Virginia senators, into a duel had failed. Out of the late election in that state there arose a difficulty between him and a leading politician of the "regular" democratic party, which, had it occurred a few years ago, would certainly have led to a [illegible]. But people learn. Riddleberger [illegible] the attempt to draw him into a [illegible], and what is most gratifying is the proof which the incident affords of the growth of a [illegible] which has enabled a southern [illegible] this without reproach to himself. The tyranny of an custom is broken, even in Virginia.

It has been but a short time since a Virginia court convicted a man named Garland, who had been engaged in "an affair of honor" in which Joseph Addison was killed, of manslaughter, and sentenced him to the penitentiary for twelve years. In Virginia and indeed in all parts of the south there have been [illegible] disputes of late which, had they occurred in former times, would have led to duels [illegible]; but when juries punish homicides committed under "the code," the same as if committed under more vulgar [illegible], there is a sign of growth toward a sound public sentiment. The south has in fact discarded dueling as a relic of barbarism.

Once dueling was defended as a system conducive to the development of fair play, and it was thought that men who settled personal and political quarrels by an appeal to deadly weapons were pursuing a justifiable if not a commendable course. Jackson, Clay, Benton and other southern leaders participated in such affrays, and portions of the west were nearly if not quite as devoted to "the code of honor" as South Carolina or Louisiana. Within the present century dueling was lamentably prevalent in the army and navy, and had many votaries in the northern states.

It was the death of Hamilton by the hand of Burr that produced a change in public sentiment throughout the north by which dueling was brought under condemnation. Hamilton himself, before going to the fatal meeting left a statement to the effect that he was impelled to it by the power of public opinion. He yielded to it as a necessity, in order that he might retain the power of being useful to the country. The sacrifice of such a man to the tyranny of a barbarous custom brought the custom under general execration in the northern states. It is safe to say that it will henceforth be heard of but rarely in any part of the country, and will soon be banished altogether.

The steel rail companies that have attempted to speculate upon the timidity of congress and of the tariff commission and to precipitate a panic for their own benefit, are being talked to in a very impressive manner in various quarters. Thus, the New York Times: "Had the duty been a reasonable one, which would not wholly shut out foreign competition, the development of the business would have been healthful. Prices and profits could not have become exorbitant, and production would not have expanded up to the high-water mark of the demand. The cry is now raised that protection cannot be withdrawn or materially diminished without ruin, but no degree of protection would prevent the wide fluctuations which have occurred and which are over likely to occur in a country like ours in railroad construction. It cannot save any interest, fostered by a hotbed policy, from violent contractions like that which the iron business has encountered. Protection is at the very bottom of the mischief. It has shut off the regulating influence of foreign competition, it has stimulated the means of production to an abnormal growth, it has drawn labor and capital into an expanding enclosure which was liable at any time to begin to contract and squeeze them disastrously. The steel rail business is undergoing a squeeze which protection has prepared for it, and the cries of distress should not prevent the application of the proper remedy."

The vote of Illinois to cede the Illinois and Michigan canal to the general government stood 363,855 for the proposition to 50,675 against it.

THE PROHIBITION AMENDMENT.

It may be stated as certain that the report published some days since to the effect that the proceedings taken by the legislative assembly at the recent session on the prohibition amendment were defective, is well founded. What has been done is of no effect whatever. The constitution requires that an amendment or amendments may be proposed in either branch of the assembly, and if the same be agreed to by a majority of all the members, such proposed amendment or amendments with the yeas and nays thereon, shall be entered on the journals of the houses and referred to the legislative assembly to be chosen at the next general election. The proposed amendment in this case was not entered upon the journals. It was an accidental omission arising from the fact that the constitution was not specially examined to see what course it was necessary to take. The consequence is that the proceeding thus far is a nullity. It will be necessary for the next legislative assembly to begin with the matter again. On inquiry about the omission the proof is clear that it was the result of oversight and not of design. We are told that the proposition to amend was in the form of a bill. When bills for laws are passed it is not required to enter them upon the journals, and so the form which the constitution requires in dealing with amendments was, in this case, overlooked. No doubt there will be more vigilance next time in attending to constitutional form.

"All roads lead to Rome" did not apply more fully to the imperial city two thousand years ago than the same expression will apply to Portland, so far as the northwest is concerned, now. When communication between Portland and the country round about is cut off the result is almost a paralysis to both. Each needs the other, and interruption of communication between them, if it be only for two days, produces inconvenience and even loss beyond what any one would imagine. Portland can't do without the country and the towns that surround her nor can they do without Portland. All jealousy on either side is absurd.

Massachusetts has an anti-discrimination railroad law, and a railroad commission to enforce it. The first successful application of the act was against a consignment of coal to Webster, Mass., carried by the New York and New England railway company. The company yielded to the law and will make its rate conform, but will test the constitutionality of the act, especially in so far as it attempts to regulate the rate to be charged on the transportation of freight through an adjacent state by a corporation that exists in law by charters from both states. The solution of this great constitutional question will be watched with interest.

The issue of THE OREGONIAN of January 1st will be the greatest paper ever printed in the northwest. Orders already received make a very large edition necessary. We shall print not less than 25,000 copies. Everything relating to the progress of the northwest will be given in detail. The year's commercial review, the details of the growth of Portland and of all the towns with which it has commercial connections, the progress of the industries of the country, etc., etc., will make a record of higher value than ever before presented here.

Admirers of Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes will be glad to know that since the resignation of his professorship in Harvard university he has been devoting himself exclusively to letters, and that the results will appear monthly, or nearly so, in the pages of his first and last love, the Atlantic Monthly, for the forthcoming year. What form they will be likely to take is not stated, but most likely the form of the prose essay, in which he has no master among writers who use the English language.

Senator Platt, of Connecticut, the chairman of the senate committee on pensions authorizes the statement that in his judgment $150,000,000 will be required for the payment of pensions for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1884. The commissioner of pensions confirms this and adds to it his estimate that $100,000,000 will be required for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1885. If the internal taxes shall be abolished where is the revenue to come from?

So we shall not have a hotel. We fear Portland lacks men like Themistocles of Athens, who knew how to make a small town a large city.

CESSATION OF THE RAIN.

THE INLAND EMPIRE VISITED BY SEVERE STORMS.

No Trains on the East Side Road Yesterday and None To-day—The West Side Road Open—Storm Notes.

Reports of further damage from the severe rain storm in the Willamette valley are about over. Very little rain fell Wednesday night and the weather yesterday was warm, clear and pleasant. All the streams tributary to the Willamette rose until noon yesterday, when they came to a stand still. The Santiam, the greatest feeder of the Willamette, was falling at 1 P. M. The weather at [illegible] remained in that quarter to seven inches. At 1 P. M. the river at this point was 15 feet [illegible] above low water mark. At noon it rose but [illegible] inches and continued slowly to rise till 4 P. M., when it was apparently at a stand. It will probably begin to recede to-day.

THE RAILROADS.

Repairs on the west side road, except the bridge at Gaston, were finished yesterday, and the mail trains north and south got through [illegible] with freight and passenger trains will be resumed to-day.

Traffic on the east side road between Portland and Albany has been suspended since Wednesday night, and there will be no trains in or out to-day. Several bridges between Albany and Jefferson have been weakened by the destruction of [illegible] and two culverts are damaged. The through train from Roseburg yesterday reached Albany and will return from there to-day. Passenger traffic will probably be resumed Saturday morning.

There was a land slide on the old portage between the upper and lower Cascades Wednesday night, but passengers got down by boat from The Dalles with little delay. The steamer boat will leave as usual this morning at 7 o'clock, and it is not unlikely that the track between The Dalles and Bonneville will be clear by noon. In this case connection will be made with the train at Bonneville. With a large force of men the track was cleared from Bonneville down to Latourelle falls. Below the falls the damage is greater and several days will be required to clear the track.

The narrow gauge railroad bridge over the north Santiam was weakened by drift wood and is impassable. On the west side travel is still suspended.

STORM NOTES.

The telegraph line between Jefferson and Albany was submerged yesterday and the only means of southern communication was via Albany, Corvallis and the west side single wire. This was used jointly by the Western Union and the railroads, and messages were received subject to five hours' delay.

A dispatch at 4 P. M. from Pendleton says that the Umatilla is higher than ever before known and water was eighteen inches deep in the streets of the town.

A floating tree came in contact with the steering oar of the ferryboat Vell[illegible] on Wednesday evening, knocking down and badly bruising Ed. Carr, who was guiding the boat.

About 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, an object which appeared to be a portion of a wharf, was seen floating past the city.

The work of improving the mouth of the Willamette has been interrupted, but no damage has been done to the dikes, etc.

Work at the dry dock was impeded by the heavy rains, and an extra pump was necessary to keep the water from the pits.

So strong was the current at F street, the landings by the railroad ferry could not be made without endangering the pontoon, and as there were no teams seeking to cross, the boat made her landings on this side at McCraken's wharf. She tied up alongside and passengers got on and off by means of a foot plank.

At Salem.

SALEM, Dec. 14—6:30 P. M.—The rain storm which prevailed here with such unprecedented severity during the last 60 hours has at last ceased and the weather has cleared up. The Willamette is still rising, however, and is some 30 feet above low water mark. Trains on the Oregon & California railroad have ceased running, numerous bridges and culverts having been washed out. Transportation is suspended in all directions.

At The Dalles.

THE DALLES, Dec. 14.—Nearly four inches of rain has fallen in the last two days, the heaviest fall ever experienced in this country for a number of years. No mail has been received for two days and this section is suffering a blockade. Very little damage was done in the city by the flood, but we hear that the roads in the country are badly washed out.

THE UMATILLA RIVER.

The Town of Pendleton Flooded—Buildings and Bridges Swept Away

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

UMATILLA, Dec. 14. A heavy and continuous rain for the past two days and nights together with warm winds, melting the snow in the Blue mountains, has caused an unprecedented rise in the Umatilla river, doing an immense amount of damage. The following was received by telephone from Pendleton and by special messenger from Echo:

At Pendleton the river flooded the greater part of the city, washed away J. H. Sharon & Co.'s saw mill, Senator Pennington's dwelling house and other buildings, also both bridges. It is rumored that the railroad bridge just below the city is also washed off. The track at the depot is undermined and badly washed. So sudden was the coming of the flood that at midnight a number of the citizens, to escape, were forced to climb into trees, and women and children were taken from them during the day. The court house at Pendleton is now occupied by the refugees who were driven from their homes by the rising waters.

The circuit court being in session at Pendleton, with its usual large attendance from other parts of the country, has intensified the excitement and want of shelter.

On the line of the O. R. & N. Co.'s Baker City branch below Pendleton the track is washed and three trains are held between Pendleton and Echo station, the track being washed away on both sides of them. It is reported that one of the trains is in the water.

At Echo, a small town on the line of the same railroad, the bridge across the Umatilla is washed away and the place flooded, and the water is deep enough to swim a horse between the depot and that place. At Foster's, still farther down the Umatilla river, the town was not flooded but some of the banks was washed away. This afternoon the water was still rising at Pendleton. Later reports say that it is now on a stand.

IN THE WALLA WALLA VALLEY.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

WALLA WALLA, Dec. 14.—Thirty-six hours rain in valley and mountains caused snow in high altitudes to melt rapidly, making creeks and rivers rise extremely high, causing considerable damage, principally to bridges. Many are washed away and others injured. A few houses along the banks of Mill creek were swept away. In Walla Walla Mill creek overrun its banks at the head of Alder street, pouring a stream through the street. The bridge at Third street was carried away and all the others injured, but can be repaired. The freshet extended all through this section. The damage can not be estimated. A few basements are flooded, but goods are not much injured. The construction train going out to repair the track turned over, injuring five railroad hands, but none seriously.

DENIAL.—D. H. Cambridge called at this office yesterday and asked THE OREGONIAN to state that he never telegraphed to the sheriff of Oroville regarding the Carr matter, and that he had absolutely nothing to do with Carr's arrest. Perhaps this is true. A reporter of this paper tried to find him Wednesday night, but could learn nothing of his whereabouts; and Cambridge's connection with the matter was given only as a current report. He uses his tongue very freely. Only a few days ago he said, publicly: "Carr is a fugitive from justice. He is my blood cousin, but if I am removed from the police force I will put him behind bars."

NO PERMANENT INJURY.—Lieut. Philip M. Price, who was hurt at the Cascades locks a few days since by a stone thrown by a blast, writes to a friend in this city that he suffers considerably but hopes that no permanent trouble will result from his injury; his physician informs him that he will be in bed and in the house for a long time. When hurt, he was standing with two others at the electric battery 800 feet back from and 50 feet above the rock to be blasted, behind a large fir tree. The charge of powder exploded was 10,000 pounds, and the rock which hit him weighed 17 pounds.

PECULIAR FUN.—Thos. Mayes and Ab. Lawrence, inmates of the city jail, were in a very sportive mood early yesterday morning and proposed to have some fun with J. N. O'Kelly, better known as "Ram-rod" Kelly, who was enjoying a peaceful snooze on the floor. So they fitted his crippled hand with paper and lighted it. Kelly awoke with a whoop to find his palm one solid blister. Assault and battery is what this sort of sport is designated in the statutes and Judge Moreland will intimate to-day how much the playful souls shall pay for their fun.

"AT ISSUE."—The case of the state vs Mason and Boobs, charged with attempt to bribe jurors, is "at issue," all demurrers, etc., having been disposed of. It will be set down among the earliest for trial.

SCHOOL TAXES.—The time for paying school taxes will soon expire. Don't forget to call at the office of the school clerk, 56 Morrison street, and settle before they become delinquent and costs are made.

NEW FIRM.

Messrs. Truman & Frieman have fitted up a very elegantly equipped office at No. 26 Morrison street, and have entered into partnership for the purpose of carrying on the real estate and loan business. Mr. Truman is well and favorably known in connection with the real estate business, while Mr. Frieman has a large circle of acquaintances among the business men of the city, he having formerly conducted the Vienna Coffee [illegible] House on Washington street. We predict for them a successful [illegible]

PEARL WEDDING.

On account of the inclement weather the celebration of the thirtieth anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Chambreau at Neppach's hall, Wednesday night, was not so well attended as it otherwise would have been. One hundred or more persons who were expected from Portland were unavoidably detained on account of the high water, and preparations had been made for about twice the number that were present. Those who were present, however, [illegible] Mr. and Mrs. Chambreau have [illegible] reception tendered them, considering the [illegible]. The hall was tastefully decorated with evergreens for the occasion, and Mrs. B. F. Schrauer, Miss Carrie Mildren [illegible] Chas. H. [illegible] and Mr. Mildren [illegible] music of Prof. and Madame Nevaro [illegible] Prof. Yost, vocal music by Mr. Mildren and others and an excellent repast [illegible]. The host of Mr. and Mrs. Chambreau gave the former an opportunity to express his sincere thanks for the honor and esteem shown them, and also to relate some interesting reminiscences of his early history. A number of handsome and appropriate tokens of esteem were presented. Altogether the affair was [illegible] complete and thoroughly enjoyable throughout, giving satisfaction alike to entertainers and entertained.

TWO CHINAMEN KILLED.

From men employed on the construction train of the O. R. & N. Co. it is learned that two Chinamen were killed Tuesday evening by a land slide in the vicinity of Rooster Rock, one of whom was completely buried alive. A number of Chinamen, it is stated, were clearing the track of one slide for the passage of the out going train, when a second slide overtook them with the result stated. Thereupon the remainder of the men refused to do any work, in consequence of which the train was returned, and the next morning passengers were transferred to a steamer which was sent to the rescue.

ANOTHER DEATH.

On Wednesday evening another member of the Hertz family succumbed to the ravages of typhoid fever, with which they have been afflicted for some time past. Only a few days ago the father died, and now the death of a married son, named George, aged about 25, is to be recorded. The funeral will take place this morning at 10 o'clock.

Y. M. C. A.

On Sunday next the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Portland will lead the meeting of the Y. M. C. A. at East Portland. Exercises will commence at 3 P. M. A cordial welcome to all.

SHOOTING WITHOUT A LICENSE.

A German calling himself Oscar P[illegible]r and who hails from Portland, was yesterday afternoon caught by Marshal Linville shooting ducks on the bottom in the neighborhood of "The Oaks." He had in his possession when arrested prima facie evidence of guilt—a trio of the feathered victims, all warm and fresh. It appeared, however, that he did not willfully violate the law, as he cannot read English. He was therefore fined $7 for his ignorance and sent to jail in default.

FROM ALBINA.

It is reported on reliable authority that a prominent foundry firm of Portland is negotiating for a block of land in the vicinity of Albina for the purpose of erecting a large building thereon for foundry purposes.

Building still continues as fast as lumber can be obtained. A number of workingmen and others who have purchased property on the outskirts of the town are erecting dwellings thereon for occupation by themselves or to rent, while others are awaiting the close of the winter season before building.

On Saturday last while one of the Burch brothers, who run a grocery and provision store at this place, was making his rounds with a cart delivering goods, his horse took fright and ran away, throwing the driver from his seat into the street. He fell heavily on his shoulder and sustained a fracture of the collar bone. The horse continued his career till the cart collided with some obstacle, causing it to overturn and scatter groceries and vegetables in all directions. The fracture of Mr. Burch has been reduced and he is doing well.

NOTES.

Mr. A. L. Kirk left on the outgoing steamer for San Francisco in hopes of gaining better health.

The drift snapped the new cable of the Jefferson street ferryboat Wednesday evening, causing the boat to drift down stream. It was secured and moored at the foot of M street. In consequence travel is suspended by that line for the present.

Subscribers of THE OREGONIAN in East Portland will please make some allowance for delay in delivering papers during the present high water. Though the Knott Bros. are doing all in their power to facilitate travel, the trips by the boat are necessarily irregular and at longer intervals than usual.

All day yesterday and the day before gangs of Chinamen have been clearing the track between the O. & C. depot and Albina. Immediately below Clinton's point a slide of about 300 feet in length occurred, which afterwards washed over and obstructed the tracks of the O. & C. road. In consequence of this the freight could not reach the company's warehouse and had to be side-tracked till the track could be cleared.

The precipitous steps erected by citizens at the embankment at Fox's Point for the accommodation of passengers by the railroad ferryboat, have been supplemented by a two story stairway by the O. R. & N. Co., which decreased the inclination nearly one-half, and being also wider and having balusters, is much easier, safer and more convenient of ascent and descent. This stairway became necessary by the O. R. & N. Co. cutting through the roadway to grade for their track to Albina.

BOARD OF FIRE DELEGATES.

The board of fire delegates for the Portland volunteer fire department met last night in the police courtroom. Present, Joseph Simon, chairman, and a quorum.

Minutes of previous meeting read and approved.

Bill of P. Kernan, of $30 for services as sexton of the firemen's cemetery, for one year, ordered paid.

The treasurer reported that the receipts for the month of November were $62.

R. Clinton, of No. 4, expelled through a mistake at the last meeting, was reinstated.

The minority report of W. E. Joyce, chairman of the cemetery committee, was read. Mr. Joyce reports the cemetery in a deplorable condition. The evergreens are dying out, and the flowers and shrubbery have either been removed or died. He recommended the dismissal of P. Kernan, the present sexton, and the employment of the sexton of Lone Fir in his stead.

Messrs. Thos. Nealy and John Carroll, members of the cemetery committee, in their majority report asserted that the cemetery was in good condition, and recommended the retention of Mr. Kernan. Adopted.

Wm. A. Daly granted an exempt certificate.

Resolution to convey the cemetery plot to exempt firemen's association, as well as the sum of $300 now on hand, and to employ the sum now on hand in improving and beautifying the cemetery. Resolution and embodied amendment referred to judiciary committee. Adjourned.

The board will hold another meeting before the first of January.

THE INJUNCTION SUIT.

What the Attorney for the Railroad Companies has to Say on the Question.

To learn the feeling of the various railroad companies in the injunction suit just filed by Wells, Fargo & Co., an OREGONIAN representative yesterday sought Hon. J. N. Dolph, attorney for the companies, who in answer to the question said:

Wells, Fargo & Co. have commenced suits in equity against the Oregon & California Railway Co. and the Oregon Railway & Navigation Co. in the circuit court of the United States for the district of Oregon, and against the Northern Pacific Railroad Co. in the district court of Washington territory, at Tacoma. The 17th day of January is the time fixed in the cases commenced in Oregon for the defendants to show cause why an injunction should not issue restraining the defendants from refusing the Wells, Fargo & Co. facilities for the express business heretofore enjoyed. Upon the hearing the answers of the defendants, it will be seen the application will probably be heard.

The complainants evidently rely upon a decision rendered sometime since by Mr. Justice Miller, of the supreme court of the United States and Judge McCrary of the circuit court, in several cases pending in different districts, but argued at St. Louis, Mo. The facts in those were no doubt different from the facts in the cases which have been commenced here.

The cases will be thoroughly contested and Wells, Fargo & Co. will get what the law gives them, and are not likely to get anything more. I will not enter into any discussion as to the merits of the case. The practical question to be determined will be whether Wells, Fargo & Co., without any consideration for the same, can compel the several railroad companies, against which suits have been brought, to afford on their existing lines of transportation, and on the future extensions of these lines, to Wells, Fargo & Co. such facilities as they may demand for the prosecution of an express business—or in other words, whether they can practically place these transportation lines, which have cost the owners millions of dollars, under the control of the court, to be operated for their benefit so far as this particular branch of the transportation business. No one questions the right of Wells, Fargo & Co. to have freight carried upon these transportation lines like any other shipper or to have its messengers and agents carried like any other passengers.

ORCHESTRAL UNION REHEARSAL.

An open rehearsal will take place this evening at the Masonic hall, Third and Alder streets. Following is the

PROGRAMME

Overture, Zampa	Herold
String Sextette, "Sounds from Home"	Gungl
Bassoon Solo, "Fantasia"	[illegible]
Overture, "William Tell,"	Rossini
Selection, "Carmen,"	Bizet
Reverie, "Heimweh,"	Gungl
Waltz, "Bal K[illegible]"	[illegible]
Overture, Banditenstreiche (by request)	Suppe

The principal pieces now under rehearsal are of exceptional difficulty. "William Tell" and "Carmen," present technical intricacies which call severely upon the powers of experienced orchestral players. It will be interesting to note the manner in which the difficulties are grappled with. At the same time it will be unfair to expect too much.

ATTEMPTED HIGHWAY ROBBERY.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

PENDLETON, Or., Dec. 14.—As R. D. Saubert was returning home last night he was stopped a half mile from town by two highwaymen, one of whom seized his horse and the other commanded him to throw up his hands. Refusing to comply the robber fired, the ball from his pistol passing through Saubert's cap. Saubert fired back but the other robber having cast his bridle reins his horse bolted and ran. The night was very dark and he could not identify his assailants nor learn the result of his shot. Pendleton is full of the roughest villains on the coast and a vigilance committee will probably be formed for this to drive them out. Half a dozen highway robberies or attempts have been committed within the last two weeks.

DEATH OF A PIONEER OF '47.

BUTTEVILLE, Dec. 11.

To the Editor of the Oregonian:

On Thursday morning, the 7th inst., death with silent approach entered the portals of the Iler homestead near this village and bore thence the spirit of James Iler, who for more than thirty years had lived here in his chosen home.

Mr. Iler was born in March, 1803, reared in Clermont county, Ohio, where he was married and continued to reside until 1842, removing thence to Illinois. He came to Oregon with the immigration of 1847 and first found a home on the land claim of that generous pioneer printer, Wm. P. Hudson, near Oregon City. Mr. Iler soon after surveyed and had recorded 640 acres of land in that district of Clackamas county known in later years as Hardscrabble, which claim, in the popular phrase of the times, was "jumped" while he and his family were elsewhere working for means to improve their new home. Mr. Iler in 1852 settled on his donation claim, 1½ miles east of Butteville, where by industry and frugality, on land which required much hard labor to improve, he carved out a pleasant home, surrounding it with the comforts needful to the enjoyment of life. Mr. Iler was a quiet, inoffensive man attending strictly to his own affairs and was respected by his neighbors. Mrs. Iler preceded him some three years to the abode of the departed. They had but two children who reached maturity, the late Mrs. Coon, Jr., and William Iler, who resides on the homestead. Thus another pioneer is numbered with the dead.

Les Apotres, Ernest Renan.

Love and enthusiasm know no such thing as situations without an issue. They laugh at the impossible, and rather than abandon hope will do violence to reality.

Many well-remembered words of the Master, especially those in which he had foretold his future advent, could be interpreted in the sense of a resurrection from the tomb. Such a belief was, besides, so natural that the mere faith of the disciples might have sufficed for its production.

The great prophets Enoch and Elijah had not tasted death. The belief was even beginning to obtain that the patriarchs and the chief men of the older dispensation were not really dead, and that their bodies lay in their sepulchres, at Hebron, still inhabited by life and the soul. It was certain to happen in the case of Jesus, as it has happened to the case of all men who have arrested the attention of their fellows.

The world, accustomed to attribute to them superhuman virtues, cannot admit that they have undergone the unjust and revolting law of death. At the moment when Mohammed expired, Omar quitted the tent, sword in hand, and threatened to strike the head off any one who dared to affirm that the prophet had ceased to live.

Death is so unreasonable a thing when it falls on a man of great heart or great genius, that the people refuse to believe in such an error of nature possible. Heroes do not die. For is it not the true existence which is prolonged in the memory of those who love us? That adored Master had for years filled the little world of his companions with joy and hope. Could they consent to leave him to molder in the tomb? No. He had lived too long and too fully in the hearts of his followers for it not to be affirmed after his death that he was still alive forever.
